Beside whose course my wrathful course is set.

But all my anger, all my pain and wee, Are vain to daunt her gladness, all Are vain to daunt her gladness, all the while

She goes rejoicing; and I do not know, Catching the soft uradiance of her smile.

If I am most her lover or her foe.

Sarah Chauncey Woolsey, in Indianapolis News.

LITTLE THINGS. What do I love you for—the gifts you bring,
The pretty things that any one could buy? could sing, Than tongue could tell, however hard I try. love you for the thrill your hond on Can give. like fire running through dry love you for the words your eyes tell Amidst the crowd when you and I just I love you for the pregnant silence, dear,
